Synopsis

"To help every kid fall in love with at least one field of knowledge, our students must encounter our fields' most galvanizing, tantalizing, and pivotal documents. Customer Reviews

I appreciated both the support and criticism given to various components of the Common Core. The authors seem to move around and through the modern political fashion just fine as they present concrete examples of the functional teaching of reading. The folksy style makes the book accessible, and many see it as a strength. I prefer just a bit more formality. Some of the "research" used to support the techniques refers to educator blog posts, but much of it does appear to be authentic educational research of varying quality. The techniques do have strong anecdotal support. In a sentence: The two authors do appear to know their business, and communicate it succinctly and accessibly.

This book is an absolute must read for any non-English teacher in high school- although it would serve as a good reminder to ELA teachers as well. I could absolutely see this book being approached as a PLC book study for groups trying to close the achievement gap in the area of secondary literacy- so many explicit strategies that could help a school building or department get traction towards reaching their goals.

This book was easy to read and follow. It presents several ideas for introducing literacy in classrooms across the curriculum in schools. It explains what each idea is and how to use it in the classroom.

Recommend for all you teachers out there. Most of the stuff is really obvious, but it is handy to have so many options for classroom activities written down in one spot. Good resource.

Entertaining and informative. Not quite what I was hoping for however in terms of readily accessible strategies, but a great addition to any professional development library.

Great teaching book! Lots of good teaching strategies for incorporating literacy Great changes to this new edition. I'm glad I got this latest edition.

Awesome information in this book to help me become a better teacher!
